

Then vs. than - Know the correct usage

Created: Friday, 27 May 2016 06:35 | Published: Sunday, 05 June 2016 08:50 | Written by Chandar Madan | Print

'Than' and 'then' are homophones, words that are pronounced similarly but have different meanings. Many of us get confused between the right usages of the two words and use them interchangeably. Let us today understand the difference between the two words and the right word to use, according to the situation.

Than is a conjunction

According to the grammar rules, a conjunction is a word that connects sentences, phrases and clauses. 'Than' is a conjunction that is used to bring out the comparisons. When you want to compare a thing, person, place or concept with another, the word than is used to show how much better or cooler it is.

For ex: Billy is smarter than his twin Sammy.

This doughnut is better than your chocolate doughnut.

Ooty is a better hill station than Matheran.

Two situations that requires you to use the word 'than' are:

When doing comparison

Ex: There are more boys than girls at this party

When depicting quantity/amount

Ex: A cup of tea costs more than lemonade

Then has multiple meanings

To indicate time, we make use of word 'then'.

Ex: First came the wife, then the husband arrived after an hour.

The example clearly depicts that 'then' is used to narrate a sequence of events.

You can also use ‘then’ while giving instructions in a step-by-step order.

Ex: Go to the mall, then take the elevator and go to the fourth floor.

Test time

Let us see if you have understood the concept right. See the below example and decide the right word – then or than.

I love riding bike ____ driving a car

What do you think would be the right word to use in the above situation? The right answer is ‘than’ and one way to deduce it is to replace the word with ‘next’. Does it make sense? I love riding bike next driving a car. No, it does not. Now, read the below sentence.

I will go to the store ____ and will buy oranges.

Now, read the blank with ‘next’. It does make sense and hence, then is the right word to use.

In conclusion

‘Than’ is used only in comparisons, and therefore, when you are comparing something you need to use the word. If it’s not comparison, make use of the word ‘then’ in all other instances. Simple, isn’t it? What could be easier to remember?

For more English learning and grammar related blogs, browse through our articles. Improve English on the go with the help of our Simple English app.

About EAgeTutor:

eAgeTutor.com is the premier online tutoring provider. eAge's world-class faculty and ace communication experts from around the globe help you to improve English in an all-round manner. Assignments and tasks based on a well-researched content developed by subject matter and industry experts can certainly fetch the most desired results for improving spoken English skills. Overcoming limitations is just a click of mouse away in this age of effective and advance communication technology. For further information on online English speaking course or to experience the wonders of virtual classroom fix a demonstration session with our tutor. Please visit www.eagetutor.com.

- By Chander Madan

Related topics:

1. Must know cooking verbs
2. A guide to subjunctives
3. Avoid subject verb disagreements
4. Common mistakes in tenses: When to use had, have and has?
5. Difference between ourselves, yourselves and themselves

Category: Spoken English / English Grammar

Joomla SEF URLs by Artio