IELTS examination is a near-mandatory doorway that people, planning to study or work overseas in countries where the main language of communication is English, have to get through. Similar to an entrance test for certain professional courses or government institutions, the IELTS test aims to determine the proficiency of candidates in the English language.

The evaluators use this test to identify different facets of English communication amongst prospective migrants to a predominantly English-speaking nation for work or studies. The key factors tested are their ability to listen, comprehend, write and speak in English language keeping in mind the key parameters that are grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation and cohesion.

The duration of the IELTS examination is two hours and forty-five minutes. The listening test continues for thirty minutes and one hour each is taken by the reading and writing tests. Just fifteen minutes are then allowed for the candidates to prove their proficiency in English communication. Candidates are graded out of a maximum of 9 marks that they can score.
