How to write compelling emails

It needs a lot of practice to write a compelling email. It is a skill that can help you grab new business opportunities, new proposal, or a new projects.

Some steps on how to write compelling emails are laid down below:

1. It is always advisable to personalize your message. Mentioning something that the recipient did for you, or giving some compliments to him can help you to get noticed.
2. A very long email will never be entertained by the recipient. All professional emails should be composed short and to the point. Professional emails should never be used to narrate a story. People want to read emails that are short and to the point.
3. If you have trouble composing the date, body you can create one email and save it as a template and use it again and again whenever you need to compose an email. This will save a lot of energy and time and help you write better.
4. Do not try to be over friendly and casual when you're writing professional emails. Business emails should be very formal and should be written with proper vocabulary. If you have any problem finding the proper vocabulary, use a dictionary to find the correct word for your email. You can also join an online Spoken English course. The Spoken English courses can be beneficial and helpful.
