Etymology:

The words 'Thank You' is used to express gratitude for help received or expected to be received. The foundation of thank you was laid in ancient religions including Christianity, Hinduism, and Islam etc. The feeling of gratitude was expected to reinforce positive behavior in the respondents. The word 'Thanks' is derived from old Proto – German 'thankoian'. The first usage of the word 'Thank You' was in 1400 AD.

Response To A Thank You:

When a person thanks you in English, you are expected to say the following:

A. Formal:

Sanjay: Thank you so much for nominating me.

You: You are welcome/ you deserve it/ Glad to help/ it's my pleasure.

B. Informal:

Suraj: Thanks man for helping me out.

You: No problem/ it is nothing/ don't mention/ it was my pleasure/ See you later/ anytime.

The common factor in any situation involving thanks is that it is to be said by giving a bright smile. Let the recipients know that you are happy to help them out. It also helps to build long lasting rapport with your friends, colleagues and others.

At times, the situation may be a hectic one where you may not get a chance to respond. In such scenarios, it is enough to just smile and nod. This simple sign language can help to build relations between human beings.

Many people make the mistake of just walking away. It is an insult to the person who has expressed gratitude to just ignore the compliments. Be sure to reciprocate the gesture in an appropriate manner.
