Are you always left confused when it comes to using an "its" or "it's"? Do these two words along with their usage drive you nuts? Well, not anymore! It's time for you to eliminate the confusion and work on understanding the basic difference between the two. Learn that it is always recommended to practice as much as you can while memorizing something new. So, stay attentive and read through this article on a slow pace.

Understand The Difference:

1. Its- Normally used as a possessive pronoun. The word "its" is usually used to describe something that is connected to an animal or a non-living object. The English language could get confusing, but understanding the theory behind the same will certainly help ease your doubts.

Examples:

- # My cat usually prefers licking its fur, rather than sitting through a bath.
- # That company definitely should go through its privacy policies yet again.
- # The tree in our backyard loses its flowers in winters.

2. It's- The word "it's" is basically a compression of two words, such as "it is" or "it has". It is used to refer to things in general and is mainly used in its shorthand form while speaking in English. Understanding its use is vital, so go through the examples slowly and thoroughly.

Examples:

- # It's a bright, sunny day. (It is)
- # It's been a great vacation here with you. (It has)
- # The world is a happy place, though it's difficult to pull through at times. (It is)

Below-mentioned is a cheat sheet to help you understand the usage of the two words in a tabular manner:

Words	When to use?	How to test?
It's	When you are about to describe something.	Replace it with "it is"
Its	When you want to indicate possession or ownership of something.	Replace with another possessive as, "her", "his", "their", or the.

To clear your confusion further, here are a few samples of how you could use the above table to test whether your usage is correct or incorrect.

It's:

1. It's very humid today.

Test- It is very humid today. (Correct)

2. India and it's people are very friendly.

Test – India and it is people are very friendly. (Incorrect)

3. Do you know if it's cold in Manali?

Test- Do you know if it is cold in Manali? (Correct)

Its:

1. Its 5 o clock.

Test- The 5 o clock. (Incorrect)

2. Will Bruno (dog) bite its tail?
